ABSTRACT

5

The present invention provides an encoding method and a class of decoding methods that provide methods for high throughput and high robustness digital communications over channels that are contaminated by impulse noise, as well as white and colored additive noise (noise that is characterized by heavy-tailed distribution), phase noise and signal fading.